French President Emmanuel Macron hastened to congratulate warmly Donald Trump back to the White House, being in the first to congratulate him "Congratulations President Donald Trump." and invite him to work together "ready to work together as we have been able to do for four years" during the Republican's first term. "With your convictions and with mine. With respect and ambition. For more peace and prosperity", and "We will work for a more united, stronger, more sovereign Europe in this new context.

By cooperating with the United States of America and defending our interests and our values" after having discussed with German Chancellor Olaf Scholz added the French president on X while the final results of the American presidential election announce that Donald Trump has won several decisive states and claims a "political victory never seen before in our country".
President Macron, who currently only enjoys 17% of positive opinion polls, is playing caution towards his American counterpart, with whom the relationship was tougher and it is sourer than sweeter...France is embroiled in an internal political crisis never experienced before, with a new Prime Minister installed at Matignon's Office for a few weeks and having to face the colossal public debt of 3100 billion Euros...

As far as German Chancellor Olaf Scholz is concerned, he expressed his congratulations to the new 47th President of the United States (whose victory cannot be made official soon, given the lead in the vote against his opponent, Democrat Kamala Harris) on a statement, "we're better off together," "The EU and the USA are two similarly large economic areas, linked by the closest economic relations in the world." by establishing the transatlantic partnership, with the USA.

The French Prime Minister, Michel Barnier (Republican, head of government for 1 month and a half) also congratulated the new 47th President of the United States, Donald Trump "The immense challenges that affect the stability of the world require close cooperation between our two democracies as well as solidarity between the European Union and the United States of America", on the social network X owned by Elon Musk, since the acquisition of Twitter, in October 2022, for $ 44 billion.

On the side of the other European leaders, EU Commission President Ursula von der Leyen conveyed fer congratulations as she expressed hope and USA and EU alliance. "I warmly congratulate Donald J. Trump. The EU and the US are more than just allies. We are bound by a true partnership between our people, uniting 800 million citizens. So let's work together on a strong transatlantic agenda that keeps delivering for them," she wrote, on X.

Mark Rutte (Former Netherland's PM) freshly chief of NATO new also congratulated Donald Trump for his victory over Kamala Harris wishing the remaining if the historic NATO's alliance, in a statement. "His leadership will again be key to keeping our Alliance strong. I look forward to working with him again to advance peace through strength through NATO,"
Not to mention, the Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban, who supported and acclaimed Donald Trump during the race, who stated on Facebook addressing Donald Trump his "good friend". "Good morning Hungary! On the way to a beautiful victory"

As for Giorgia Meloni, the Italian Prime Minister, she also rushed to congratulate Donald on his victory, while recalling the proximity of the two nations "Italy and the United States are 'sister' nations, linked by an unshakeable alliance, common values and a historic friendship. It is a strategic bond which I am sure we will now strengthen even more," she published on her X feed.

Thus, Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky said he hoped that his election would help Ukraine obtain a "just peace". “I appreciate President Trump’s commitment to the ‘peace through strength’ approach to world affairs. This is exactly the principle that can concretely bring Ukraine closer to a just peace,” he said of the X
As far as Vladimir Putin, Russian President is concerned, “I’m not aware of any plans by the president to congratulate Trump,” Peskov (Russian’s President spokesperson) told reporters shortly after Trump claimed a “magnificent” victory over his Democratic opponent and U.S. Vice President Kamala Harris.
“Let’s not forget that we’re talking about an unfriendly country that’s both directly and indirectly involved in a war against our nation,” he added. (Source The Moscow Times)

Another leader concerned about the war in the Middle East, Gaza and Lebanon in retaliation for the October 7, 2023 massacre in Israel by Hamas, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu hailed the victory claimed by Donald Trump, congratulating him on achieving "the greatest comeback in history." "Your historic return to the White House represents a new beginning for America and a powerful recommitment to the great alliance between Israel and America," calling Donald Trump's result "a huge victory!"
